Montclair Youth is a Radio Host

J acob Lewin, 12, of Montclair is hosting a radio show on the newly created Radio Free Montclair, called "Everybody's Interesting," where he interviews people for 20-30-minute segments. His first interview was with Marcia Almeida, a community organizer and his second was with Zach Tenorio a musician who grew up in Montclair. His goal is to "make people understand that everyone has things about them that they can be proud of." Being a radio host is second nature to Jacob, who spends time performing in professional, community and school theater and film.
He says he loves being a radio host and connecting with his community. To other youth considering hosting a show, he says, "You can do whatever you put your mind to doing." As word spreads about Radio Free Montclair, Jacob hopes more people tune into his show.
